A GREAT MEETING.

The Senator Ashurst Makes Eloquent Speech at the Airdome.

The campaign speech made last Thursday evening at the Airdome, by Henry F. Ashurst, Arizona's brilliant junior United States senator, who is a candidate for re-election, was one of the most eloquent every heard in Nogales.

The gifted orator was interrupted time and again by the largest audience that ever turned out in this city to hear a candidate for office.

The immense Airdome was crowded with Republican and Democratic voters, many of whom were ladies.

Senator Ashurst and the other Democratic speakers who preceded him, were introduced by Judge Frank J. Duffy, who briefly told of each one's qualifications for the office aspired for.

Jack Bolin, for state mine inspector, was the first to present his claims for re-election, being followed by Jesse L. Boyce, for auditor, who made a great hit. He said when he spoke in Prescott and declared that he was for reform, a man in the audience interrupted to say that "chloroform" was needed instead.

David F. Johnson for treasurer, followed Mr. Boyce with a talk on his candidacy, and Amos A. Betts, for state corporation commissioner in a brief talk convinced many that he is "qualified" to fill the important office of corporation commissioner. He paid a high compliment to the chairman of the meeting, whom he predicted would some day occupy the state capitol as the state's chief executive. Mr. Betts also complimented J. B. Bristol, the efficient secretary of the Nogales Chamber of Commerce.

Senator Ashurst, who was the last speaker, received a great ovation when introduced by the chairman.

The main portion of the Senator's address was devoted to a comparison of the records of the Republican and Democratic parties, after he had opened with a brief reference to state politics. He paid a high tribute to Judge Joseph H. Kibbey, his political opponent, and declared that he would rather be beaten than resort to unfair methods in the campaign. The Senator spoke glowingly of the splendid record made by Governor Hunt, and mentioned Judge Ross, candidate for the supreme court, and Charles Howe for tax commissioner.

He took up the money question first, comparing the failure of the Republicans to act on the question with the speedy passage of the bank reserve bill by the Democrats. The passage of this bill, he declared, was one achievement of the administration that merited the support of voters if nothing else.

The rural credits bill came next, he stated, in the financial program of the party, and he showed how loans made to farmers, nominally at 6 per cent, would be reduced to 3 1/4 per cent.

"Please read our record," he declared was the motto of the Democrats, quickly adding that "Please forget our record," was the motto of the Republicans.

He paid his respects to Col. Roosevelt in a humorous vein for making up with the same people that four years ago had robbed him of the nomination.

Good roads, he stated, was another matter in which the Democrats had far surpassed the Republicans. A bill appropriating $85,000,000 for good roads had become a law under the Wilson administration while nothing had ever been done by the Republicans except to "build a boulevard every four years to ride into power."

Senator Ashurst went into a detailed defense of the federal child labor law recently passed, which had been attacked in Phoenix recently by James Garfield, ex-secretary of interior, as "ineffective." A telegram was read by the senator from Senator Kenyon of Iowa, a Republican, testifying that the senate bill was strong and easily enforced, and that the amendments to the law had been drawn by Senator Cummins, of Iowa, also a Republican. The reading of this telegram drew loud cheers from the big audience.

The ship bill was the next item of Democratic result taken up and Senator Ashurst showed how American shipping had been driven from the seas under Republican control until only 6 per cent of American commerce was carried in American ships under Taft. He predicted that the Democratic policy of ship building would restore American control.

After mentioning the workman's compensation bill which the Democratic congress had passed Senator Ashurst declared that he would not discuss the tariff question except to say that President Wilson was the first president to take the tariff out of politics.

The suffrage question was next taken up. "President Wilson is the only president who ever voted for woman's suffrage" he asserted amid great cheering and then he compared the attitude of Hughes who did not vote in New York when a suffrage amendment was before the people.

Referring to the income tax, he compared the attitude of Wilson, who favored it in New Jersey, with that of Hughes in New York, who opposed it.

He touched on the question of preparedness, declaring that Grover Cleveland had built the navy that won the Spanish-American war. He declared that the Democratic party had increased the army from 32,000 men to 170,000 men, and the pay to $15 per month adding vocational training.

He praised Wilson's attitude in keeping the country out of war, and raised a great laugh by asking:

"If there is anybody who thinks that we ought to go to war, let him come forward and give me his name and I will take him to the nearest recruiting station."

Senator Ashurst also touched on the government powder plant and armor plate manufactory, showing how in the battleship "Arizona" $1,000,000 had been saved on armor plate.

Senator Ashurst closed with an eloquent eulogy of Wilson's peace policy, declaring that he would go to war if the honor of the country demanded it.

Following the speaking an informal reception was held at the Montezuma hotel lobby, where hundreds of people met Senator and Mrs. Ashurst and the Democratic state candidates.

From here the Ashurst party motored to Patagonia, yesterday, thence to the county fair at Sonoita, where several hours were spent before continuing on to Tombstone, where the candidates spoke last evening to a great audience of enthusiastic admirers of Senator Ashurst and the members of his party.
